Campus Technology Reveals Dr. Richard DeMillo to Keynote 2016 Conference

DeMillo, Computer Scientist and Bestselling Author, will present how the willingness to disrupt the status quo will shape the future of the 21st century Institution

PALM BEACH GARDENS, Fla. – May 10, 2016 – Campus Technology Conference, an higher education technology event produced by LRP Conferences, LLC, an affiliate of LRP Publications, today announced Richard DeMillo, Ph.D., computer scientist, author, and executive director of the Center for 21st Century Universities at the Georgia Institute of Technology, will be the Opening Keynote presenter for the 23rd annual higher education technology event. Setting the tone for the four-day event being held Aug. 1 – 4, 2016 at the Hynes Convention Center in Boston, DeMillo’s presentation, A Revolution in Higher Education: Tales From Unlikely Allies, will explore the complex issues confronting contemporary institutions and how unexpected partners are working together to transform higher education.

DeMillo has authored more than 100 articles and books, including Abelard to Apple: The Fate of American Colleges and Universities and Revolution in Higher Education: How a Small Band of Innovators will Make College Accessible and Affordable. He is the former Chief Technology Officer of Hewlett-Packard and a recent winner of the American Publishers Award for Professional and Scholarly Excellence in education practice.

“Mr. DeMillo is a recognized expert in higher education technology,” said Dr. John Hess, Campus Technology program chair. “He will present an important field level analysis of substantial challenges and will prepare attendees to develop and evaluate promising solutions.”

DeMillo’s keynote will also deliver an in-depth look into the world innovators are building.

“Instead of seeing only crisis and limitation, Mr. DeMillo is focused on positive and future-oriented visions that emphasize opportunities for learners and institutions while highlighting the continuing value of higher education,” said Hess.

In addition to DeMillo, Campus Technology 2016 will include dozens of leading higher education tech experts presenting real-world insight and solutions to institutions’ various technology challenges in seven unprecedented conference session tracks: IT Leadership and Policy; CIO: Next Generation; Technology Solutions; Teaching and Learning in the Digital Age; IT in the Digital Age; IT Management and Networking; and Online and Blended Learning. The event’s Expo Hall will host more than 100 exhibitors showing attendees the latest education technologies through live presentations, hands-on product demonstrations, poster sessions, tech classrooms and more.

“Attendees can visit with more than 100 companies providing solutions for privacy and security to mobile learning or network infrastructure,” said Rebecca McKenna, vice president of Global Events and publisher at LRP. “With more than 40 types of products represented it’s a great opportunity to explore or take advantage of a demo.”

Registration is currently open. For more information and to register for Campus Technology Conference, visit www.CampusTechnologyConferences.com or call toll-free 1-800-727-1227.
